An Audacious Fraud Exposed

The following is an extract from a leading article in the Sacramento Record, one of the ablest and best papers published on the Pacific Coast:

"How far apart professions of public spirit and common honesty may be, is strikingly illustrated by the revelations which have been made concerning the subscription list to the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad. That scheme is engineered by the Bulletin, which has for several weeks been publishing what purported to be genuine lists of bona fide subscriptions, and which at the same time has been showering abuse upon all who dared to doubt the honesty and practicability of the undertaking. The name of the 'people' has been taken in vain by that journal with the most persistent recklessness, and leading citizens have been denounced as venal without the slightest scruple, whenever they have refused to come to heel like whipped dogs at the call of that insolent sheet. In the midst of this storm of vituperation it has occurred to some of those who have been thus traduced to examine the Bulletin's subscription list, and the results of this analysis are most astonishing. It is shown that the collectors of these subscriptions have been pursuing a system of the most unblushing and deliberate fraud. Not only have names undiscoverable either in the Directories or in the Assessor's books been freely inserted; not only have the slums of the Barbary Coast and the city front been raked for proletaires willing to sign anything for a glass of whisky; not only have imaginary names been used, but the very tombstones of Lone Mountain have been resorted to, and the signatures of citizens long passed to their account been added to the list, and published as indicative of the vitality of the enterprise. This is certainly the first time that a 'live' project has been supported by dead men, but it appears that even the ample vistas of the great cemetery failed to furnish names enough, and history was drawn upon by the ingenious but unscrupulous manipulators of this stupendous fraud. The so-called 'People's Railroad,' backed by a few hundred burners from the Barbary Coast, a few score of names taken from tombstones, and nobody knows how many shades of departed historical personages, is placed before the public with a triumphant flourish, and is recommended as the only enterprise that has honesty and good faith behind it. The Colorado line is denounced as a humbug; the compromise is spurned as pernicious; and this immaculate list of dead men, loafers and nonentities, is gravely advanced as proof that the mass of the people are on the side of the Bulletin. It is possible that more impudent and unprincipled things than this have been done before, but if so we have failed to hear of them. But if the people of San Francisco have not greatly changed of late years, we think these revelations will settle the business of the Atlantic and Pacific Railroad, despite the Bulletin and Pringle's interested opinions. It is impossible that so glaring a fraud can be suffered to pass unrebuked, nor have we any fear that it will go unpunished."

AFRAID OF IT.—The lower classes in Japan are afraid of the Telegraph. They cannot altogether see "how the old thing works," and they are simple enough to think it a device of the devil, and that the wires are coated with the blood of young women, and that the census now being taken is for the sole purpose of finding out the number of available Japanese maidens whose blood will do for telegraphic purposes. The idea is a curious one, and it is strange that the Japanese should not understand the explanation.

"Massa Christopher Columbus was a queer man," said a negro orator; "a notion crossed him one day, and then he crossed an ocean."
